

ABSTRACT

A method for automatically creating random passwords for a client device and adding those passwords to a database of authorized users of a network. The device automatically generates credential data. The credential data is communicated to an authentication server. The authentication server automatically adds the credential data to a database of authorized users.